

Title	Against the Indignities of Trump, We Are Either All Together, or We Fall
Type	Article
URL	https://ualresearchonline.arts.ac.uk/id/eprint/15128/
Date	2017
Citation	Eden, Michael (2017) Against the Indignities of Trump, We Are Either All Together, or We Fall. Trebuchet Magazine.
Creators	Eden, Michael

Usage Guidelines

Please refer to usage guidelines at <http://ualresearchonline.arts.ac.uk/policies.html> or alternatively contact ualresearchonline@arts.ac.uk.

License: Creative Commons Attribution Non-commercial No Derivatives

Unless otherwise stated, copyright owned by the author

DOWNLOAD MAGAZINES

05: Art and Crime

PRINT MAGAZINES

04: The Body

SUBSCRIPTIONS

03: Art and Resistance

ART EVENTS

Mo	Tu	We	Th	Fr	Sa	Su
				1	2	3
4	5	6	7	8	9	10
11	12	13	14	15	16	17
18	19	20	21	22	23	24
25	26	27	28	29	30
«	<	Nov 2019			>	»

UPCOMING

Ithell Colquhoun: Surrealism, Occultism & Sexuality
Watch This Space
A Celebration of Talk Talk and Mark Hollis
Bang Face Rave Weekend

Against the Indignities of Trump, We Are Either All Together, or We Fall

PEARLCLUTCHING AND PROFESSIONAL OUTRAGE LED US HERE, IT'S TIME TO SPEAK PLAINLY.

18/01/2017 Michael Eden Society

Previously, we isolated a method by which manipulating the reader's revulsion at the bias of a clumsy attack is now an established technique of political propaganda.

Any legitimate criticism of a power hungry, right wing, gun loving politician is lost, because any rational person can see that what's really worrying is the bias and sexism of the writer. It's smoke and mirrors, obfuscation and, mostly, misdirection.

Take again, the example from an address given to the Birkbeck Critical Theory School in July 2016 by Jacqueline Rose, and how it dovetails nicely into the accepted working caricature of the soon to be inaugurated President of the United States of America:

"It is the curse of masculinity that men are expected to shed any sign of vulnerability, to hold themselves erect as they strut across the world's stage, above all behave as if they have always, with no flicker of doubt, believed in themselves".

What Rose describes in the politicians above is low character, not the 'real man' ideal (which is far harder to undermine and is what the men she dislikes are unable to live up to). In this way her argument takes on the mien of a heckler who, under no pressure, makes the occasional funny comment. This embarrasses the performer who, under the pressure and scrutiny of the audience, then looks stupid.

The problem with this approach is that men who otherwise might have agreed with her will pity her targets, knowing only too well (as all boys do) that they are not quite 'real men' either. Similarly, the example of men writing about women in politics cited in my last essay (focused on Sarah Palin) has the effect of causing the female reader to ignore any real criticism and think instead about how hard it is for women to break into the public world of politics and make their way under the scrutiny of the public.

This kind of gendered stereotype posturing might make a person seem edgy, but really it isn't very clever at all and it traps us in a loop, making powerful people seem tragic and sympathetic. Whilst we debate the bias of the writer, the megalomaniac skips his bumptious way to the White House.

And now, after so much of this we have a new master, one who is certainly not the figure of the 'real man' ideal. Instead, he is immune to this criticism, he assumes it as a value. He is what men become when they stop aspiring to be 'real men' (responsible, powerful, measured, inventive and culpable). Instead he, child of our time, is an undignified indulged bully who will press any class, sex or economic advantage he has to crush his opposition.

This is the golem forged under the kind of media assaults that Rose, among many others, like to throw about.

In a sense it would be better if, instead of decrying Clinton for calling Trump's supporters 'deplorable', Rose was able to see how she has actively contributed to their ignorance. They are stupid, aren't they? Not because they are frustrated with established power, but rather because they are willing to look over Trump's idiocy and indignity and still claim that's our guy!

A person does not need a degree or privileged access to knowledge to hold to values they always claimed to uphold: respect, fairness, dignity. These were values the right are supposed to believe in. Rose et al can't teach them this lesson, so focus their efforts on maintaining their own position instead. Such commentators are too ingrained with a certain intellectual method. Defending Trump's supporters from Clinton's attacks is patronising them in a way more irritating than Clinton could ever have been!

We should not simply condemn people who voted for Trump from some fantastical position of purity, but also we should not give too much credit to the so-called 'ignored' class; they have elected a demagogue! This is wrong, this is foolish! A credible person says what they think.

It is also true that only Trump's supporters can have a genuinely tragic political moment now, because they voted for something different. When it doesn't materialise there will be an opening for self-awareness to occur. Those academics (like Rose and Buck-Morrs) who advised voting for Hilary would have been faced with a similar paradigm. Had she been elected, they and those like them could really only shrug their shoulders when nothing of import actually changed. All of this is a mess and none of us come out of it very well.

My suspicion is that this kind of aggressively white-knighting liberal intellectual is finished as a useful agent in society. Like an old rocker condemned to repeat the same old songs forever, they and their type are condemned to looking for another neglected sector to act for (women, gay, trans, black, etc.).

For true change, we are either all together on a clean slate, or we are thousand fragmented pieces fighting each other while our opponents agree to disagree and pursue their shared goal: maintaining wealth and power.

Image 1 by Dan Booth. Not to be reproduced without express prior permission.

Image 2 by Pixabay/Geral

Sympathy/Empathy: The Very Air That Evil Breathes.
11/01/2017
In "Society"

A Hypocrite's Guide to the Internet (Part two)
22/08/2015
In "Society"

The Right Business: Politics and the Randian Hero
26/02/2016
In "Features"

About Michael Eden > 77 Articles

Michael Eden is the Arts Editor for Trebuchet Magazine, an artist and researcher working in London and the south east, his artistic practice is concentrated on painting and he divides his time between this and lecturing in art history and contextual studies.

« PREVIOUS
Want a More Intense Workout?
Ditch the Phone

NEXT »
Donald Trump Moth Discovered...
On the Mexican Border

BE THE FIRST TO COMMENT

Leave a Reply

Your email address will not be published.

Comment

Name *

Email *

Website

☐ Save my name, email, and website in this browser for the next time I comment.

☐ - three - four

☐ Notify me of follow-up comments by email.

☐ Notify me of new posts by email.

POST COMMENT

This site uses Akismet to reduce spam. Learn how your comment data is processed.

NEW CYCLES IN ART

- Awaken Imagined Still Lives
18/11/2019
- No Heroic Male Master
12/11/2019
- Jane Bustin's V - Tea Bowls (and Other Things) in Paris
31/10/2019
- Cyril de Commarque Interview
26/10/2019
- Modern Panic Celebrates 10th Anniversary
25/10/2019
- Artificials at the Saatchi Gallery
24/10/2019
- Mark Leckey: O' Magic Power of Bleakness
17/10/2019
- Joker, a Film to Fall Out Over?
10/10/2019
- 1-54 African Contemporary Arts Fair 2019
09/10/2019
- William Kentridge In Praise of Shadows
03/10/2019

THE TREBUCHET

Trebuchet Magazine: New fine art for contemporary collectors and abundant creatives

TREBUCHET NEWSLETTER SIGN UP

email address
SUBSCRIBE

MEDIA AND PUBLISHING

TAGS

- ACTIVISM AFRICA AMERICA ART
- BANDS DANCE DIY ELECTRONICA
- ENVIRONMENT EXHIBITIONS FESTIVALS
- FILM FOLK FOOD GALLERY GIGS
- HEALTH INDIE INTERVIEWS
- LITERATURE LIVE MAKE BETTER MUSIC
- MENTAL HEALTH METAL MUSIC
- NATURE PAINTING PHOTOGRAPHY
- POINTY HEADS POLITICS PROG
- PSYCHOLOGY PUNK RESEARCH ROCK
- SCIENCE SEX SOCIETY SONGWRITING
- STUPID HUMANS TECHNOLOGY TRAVEL
- UK USA WORK